Arun K Tiwari. I must say, it is very informative and has all the facts that you will need to know. The book is an easy read and is a must read for everyone. We all can think of one or more important things that happened in our lives. A couple of questions in our minds are: When did it happen? Why did it happen? What did we do after that? What happened to the people who were around us? These questions and a thousand more are explored in this book by APJ Abdul Kalam. He talks about how important space flight is to our lives and how every activity we do is connected with it. The book includes, for example, how using chemical weapons in our bodies is akin to using nuclear weapons in space. He also explains how we need to find a place for ourselves in the universe. To our surprise, we find out that he did not just discover space, he created a whole new space. Dr Kalam says that humans should be grateful to the heavens. The age old question of why there is evil, poverty and inequality in the world is also answered in the book. Among other things, Dr Kalam quotes George Carlin's famous saying, "When you're young, you have so many questions. When you get older, you realise that some questions are better left unanswered". This book teaches us about how important and valuable it is to travel in space. It shows us how important we are in the universe and how we should not just think about ourselves and our lives, but also that of the universe. This book is amazing. It is extremely informative. You can do whatever you like to do after reading it. Have a wonderful day.
